As the year draws to a close and the natural time for reflection is upon us, we at Baker University sincerely thank each and every member of our Circle of Giving for making possible the unparalleled success of the 2010-2011 school year.

Capital projects that a mere two years ago seemed unattainable have been initiated, and in the case of the Mulvane Hall Transformation, ground has already been broken and construction is underway. This year, our students entered improved facilities with more resources than previous years, and thanks to the incredible levels of engagement and generosity from people like you, that narrative will continue forever.
Appreciative of the Leitnakers’ commitment to the Baldwin City community, a friend of Jim’s father created the F.C., Joyce A. & Ruth Leitnaker Memorial Scholarship to support outstanding upperclassmen in the field of written journalism. Talented Baker Orange editors Rachel Hawkins and Meagan Thomas currently benefit from the scholarship with aspirations of working as reporters at a daily newspaper.

After earning a doctorate, Jim taught at Baker before he and his family packed their belongings and moved in 1965 to East Tennessee, where he worked at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory and the Oak Ridge Gaseous Diffusion Plant.

The Leitnakers remain passionate about their community and Baker University. Through a charitable gift annuity, Jim recently formed the Jean and James Leitnaker Endowed Scholarship to assist future science majors who are committed to attending medical school to further prepare for a career in health care. As we look to the future, scholarship recipients and all students will benefit from the new Ivan L. Boyd Center for Collaborative Science Education.

“I am thrilled by the developments with the science building,” he said. “This scholarship will focus on helping students interested in the medical field, something that is dear to me, especially as my wife continues her battle with Alzheimer’s.”

Being awarded this prestigious scholarship has been a blessing to my family and me. Being the editor of The Baker Orange newspaper, along with holding different leadership positions in other organizations around campus, doesn’t lend to enough time for a part-time job. This scholarship allows me to focus on my academic work, as well as multiple extracurricular activities. I am grateful for those who donate their time and resources to Baker University, and I hope that I will be able to give back in this way to the University one day.”

Rachel Hawkins
F.C., Joyce A. & Ruth Leitnaker Memorial Scholarship

Devoted to a life of service, Jim Leitnaker has long been known as a man of integrity, putting the needs of others before his own.

The 1949 Baker University graduate served his country by fighting in two wars. He returned home to Baldwin City to help his ailing father continue his business. Years later he even taught chemistry at his alma mater. His selfless acts continue today as he cares for Jean, his wife of 65 years. He has even helped the Kingston, Tennessee, community launch a reading program for children.

“I know I received a strong education at Baker University,” Jim said. “A lot of people feel that way, and the close-knit family atmosphere contributed a lot to the positive experiences and prepared me well for life.”

At the age of 18 in 1943, Jim was called into the service for World War II. Stationed in College Station, Texas, he was part of the Army Specialized Training program. A year later, he was a member of the combat engineer battalion sent to France, where he nearly lost his life. While building bridges across the Rhine River, shrapnel pierced his leg after he stepped on a mine.

A couple of years later he moved back to Baldwin to run the family-owned Baldwin City Ledger while his father, “Cherry,” recovered from a heart attack. During that challenging time, Jim worked 30 hours per week at the newspaper and went back to college to complete his degree in mathematics before heading to Korea in 1950, leaving behind his wife and two young children.

Mr. Jefferson, a successful business owner in Kansas City, Kansas, valued higher education and believed his daughters deserved an opportunity to become the first in their family to attend college. He expected his daughters to thrive at a small private university.

“He thought Baker was the best place for us,” recalled Mary Jefferson, a 1975 graduate. “He was attracted to a school known for quality.”

In appreciation of their parents’ dedication to education, Mary and Linda Jefferson Greiner, ’71, created the Jefferson-Greiner Endowed Scholarship to honor the memory of L.H. Jefferson and Cynthia M. Jefferson. The gift will benefit students dedicated to the liberal arts with special consideration given to English, history, music and foreign language majors.

A liberal arts education prepared the sisters well as they developed into dedicated educators. Loyal to their schools, they both started and ended their careers at the same place. Linda taught English at Olathe North High School, previously Olathe High School, her entire career before retiring a couple of years ago. Mary, meanwhile, taught history and English for 33 years at Santa Fe Trail Junior High School in Olathe.

Making a difference in the lives of students and embracing new challenges provided rewarding careers.

“I liked watching kids discover the magic in a book and how it relates to life,” Linda said. “You could teach the same lesson to three different classes and they all react differently.”

Mary recalls the one-on-one attention from professors and bonding with her classmates during her time at Baker. For the past decade, she and her friends from college still gather monthly as members of the Baker Book Club. She wants the next generation of students to experience similar lifelong connections.

“We believe in paying it forward,” Mary said. “We are glad to help provide financial assistance for upperclassmen and help them finish their degree during these tough times.”

During her time at Baker, Linda was fond of students sharing their study abroad experiences and learning more about students from other countries.

“Baker makes you a well-rounded person and opens you up to things in the world,” said Linda, whose son, Geoff, graduated from Baker in 2002 with a business degree and traveled to Vienna as a student.

The sisters prefer that the endowed scholarship they created recognize students with a passion for helping others.

“We always said we need to give back to Baker because of what Baker has made us become,” Linda said.
Lifelong learning...

Lynn and Duane Chanay value the role education plays in developing students. The two Baker University graduates devoted their lives to teaching others in Moline, Illinois. Lynn was a high school mathematics teacher, and Duane was a professor at Black Hawk College, where he also served as chair of the department of natural sciences and engineering.

Their appreciation for education was fostered in the mid-1960s as students at Baker, where Lynn’s father, Calvin Foreman, was the chair of the mathematics department and her mother, Dorothy, taught piano lessons on campus and was a patroness for the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority. Because of their influence, Lynn realized the difference an education can make.

“We followed my parents’ example of lifelong learning,” Lynn said. “You grow up in that environment and, naturally, you believe you will go on to college and so will the grandchildren.”

Originally interested in literature and English, Lynn was encouraged by her father to consider mathematics as a career option.

“He told me I would have a better opportunity to find a job with a mathematics background,” Lynn recalled of the fatherly advice.

Nearly 50 years after graduating from Baker, the Chanays continue to provide rewarding opportunities for students. In honor of Lynn’s parents, the couple partnered with Lynn’s brother, Jim, and sister, Pamela, to create the Dorothy Foreman Scholarship, designated for a talented upperclassman excelling as a pianist, and the Dr. Calvin Foreman Scholarship for a junior or senior math major who has aspirations of a career in mathematics. Rising students Adrienne Barclay and Stephanie Colwell are the recipients of those well-earned scholarships.

“We wanted to give something back to Baker University,” Lynn said. “Several students work part time and still require financial aid.”

The first person in his family to attend college, Duane remembers the impact science professors Ivan Boyd, John Nickel and Milford White made on him as a student. He wants the next generation of students to have similar engaging and rewarding experiences. Originally interested in majoring in physical education and coaching basketball, Duane took a biology course his freshman year and was immediately attracted to the sciences.

He traces his success to his time at Baker and the encouragement of his professors, leading to his career as an educator that spanned more than 30 years.

“I was fortunate to have excellent instructors,” Duane said. “They were influential in my development in teaching. These scholarships are designed to inspire the next generation of educators.”

“I was fortunate to have excellent instructors,” Duane said. “They were influential in my development in teaching. These scholarships are designed to inspire the next generation of educators.”

With the Dorothy Foreman Scholarship, I was able to focus on growing as a musician and spending many hours and days practicing the piano. It has given me peace of mind and has helped me pursue my goal of becoming a music and piano teacher. I am very thankful for this scholarship, and I will continue to be thankful every time I use my degree from Baker University in the future.”

My Sincerest Thanks

A MESSAGE FROM BAKER UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT PAT LONG

Generous gifts from our loyal alumni and friends enable our students at Baker University to excel. The lessons our students learn here, in and out of the classroom, transform and prepare them for life.

Because of the kindness shown by many of the names highlighted in the Honor Roll of Donors, we recently broke ground on the Mulvane Hall Transformation project, and we are close to opening our beautiful new “front door,” a Welcome Center at Denious Hall. Your commitment to these worthwhile projects and others allows us to continue recruiting talented students and expand our course offerings. Earlier this semester U.S. News & World Report recognized Baker as the highest-ranked private university in Kansas, for the Midwest Region. Kiplinger’s Personal Finance also named Baker one of the top 100 Best Values in Private Universities for combining outstanding quality with affordability. These are honors certainly worth celebrating as we continue to strive for a first-choice institution.

Through the Circle of Giving in 2011, we pay tribute to the generous donors who supported projects that enhance Baker. These gifts also provide scholarships for our community’s future doctors, teachers and business professionals, illustrating our mission to develop confident, competent and responsible contributors to society. Your commitment advances a legacy of excellence. Better than anyone, you know the difference Baker has made for more than 150 years and will continue to do so in the future.

The annual Honor Roll of Donors acknowledges the selfless contributions and pledge payments from July 1, 2010 to June 30, 2011. Next year this list will be even more extensive as we have benefitted from record-breaking generosity in the fall of 2011. I also want to extend a very special thank you to all of our many donors who wish to remain anonymous.

It is truly an exciting time to be a part of our outstanding University, and 2012 promises to be even better as we prepare our next generation of future leaders.

On behalf of our students and the University community, I express my gratitude to you, our friends of Baker, for your spirit of giving.

May each of you be truly blessed in the upcoming year.
