

Certification of Completion of High School, GED, or Home Study Program

This form is required for all undergraduate students who have earned fewer than 48 college credit hours

To receive federal aid, federal regulations require that a student must be qualified to study at the postsecondary level. For federal aid purposes, this means that a student must have graduated from high school, earned a General Education Development (GED) certificate, or possess a certificate of completion of a home-study program recognized by the state. To certify that you meet this requirement, please complete the following:
