

Baker Research Toolbar (LibX) Guide

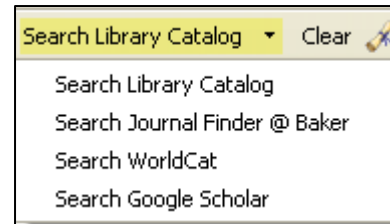

1. LIBX LIBRARY TOOLBAR

The LibX extension adds a toolbar to your browser for faster access to Library resources.

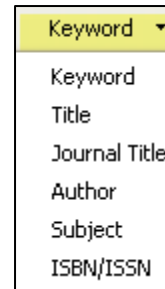

Set up your toolbar:

Use the dropdown menu on the Search button to select which resource to search. The button can search the Baker Library Catalog, locate titles of journals using Find A Journal, search for books worldwide using Worldcat or search for resources using Google Scholar.

Select the type of search (Keyword, Author, Title, etc.) from the dropdown menu on the left.

Enter search terms into the toolbar and start the search. You can do this in three ways:

- Type the search term(s) into the toolbar and click the Search button to begin the search;
- Highlight any keyword, author, title, call number, subject, or ISBN/ISSN on the page. Right click and select "Add Selection to Search As...", and let LibX paste your highlighted terms into the search box. Then click the Search button to start the search (Applicable in Firefox only);
- Or, simply drag the highlighted text onto the Search button to start the search automatically (Applicable in Firefox only).

Combine several terms in a single search. Add more search boxes by clicking the down-arrow button

2. CUSTOMIZED RIGHT-CLICK MENU

Highlight any term on the browser page and right click to call up the context menu. The menu items will change depending on the type of text that is highlighted.

- Select one of the search options to instantly search the Baker Library catalog by keyword, title, author, or do a Google Scholar search.
- Reload the page through Baker's proxy server to get off-campus access to Baker-only resources.

3. EMBEDDED LINKS IN POPULAR WEBSITES

LibX places the  cue in many external web pages like Amazon.com. Click the cue to see if Baker owns the book, or to get online access to the article.
